ONE ONLY.

One song to the sad
And the heart is made glad;
One beautiful rose to a friend:
One small candy toy
For the dear baby boy.

One smile—it will count for the end.

One word to the wise;
One chance wins a prize:
One wave turns the billowy tide:
One fur to the sail,
It will conquer the gale;

One stroke turns the row-boat aside.

One step to the right,
It will lead to the light.

One vision of joy as you roam;
One lift to the load,
It will shorten the road,
And bring you with cheer to your home.

One man in the land;
And a shake of the hand;
A stranger is stranger no more;
One brave daring friend,
And a love without end
Will guard you on ocean and shore.

—Chicago Graphic.

UNCLE DAN'S PRESENT.

The Eventful History of a Black Silk Dress.

From the very beginning of our acquaintance Uncle Dan seemed to dislike me. You know he was Jack's own uncle and when I was introduced as his nephew's wife, he took my hand gingerly, muttered something about a butterfly and refused to congratulate my proud husband. That was directly after our marriage. I was dressed then as prettily as my means would allow, for having used my own hard-earned money for my trousseau I thought I had a right to wear the gay things that Uncle Dan appeared to scorn.

But the strongest material will wear out, and mine was no exception to the rule. Jack was unfortunate in business and I was compelled to be so economical that I could purchase only the plainest of dresses. As time went on things were worse; our family grew larger and our income smaller; we were sometimes forced to deny ourselves substantial food. Uncle Dan must have known how reduced we were,

and although he was a wealthy man he never rendered us the slightest assistance. On the contrary he often helped us to eat our last loaf of bread. But we did not expect anything from Uncle Dan while he lived. We knew that he loved to hoard his gold. Yet the fact that we were the nearest kin, coupled with the one that he spent considerable time at our humble home, led us to believe that we would be the heirs to his vast wealth.

One day Uncle Dan surprised me by asking if I would take a walk with him. I consented. Then he took me to a dressmaker's, who, without any orders from him at the time, cut to my measure a beautiful black silk dress. I submitted, carefully hiding the astonishment that I felt, but when we left the house I questioned Uncle Dan as to his reasons for presenting me with so suitable a gift. "I want you to have one decent dress," he said, testily, "and I expect you always to keep it. Do not part with it under any consideration or I shall never again make you a present.

Now get through with the trying on and when the thing is done bring it thorough search was instituted, the property was turned over to a distant cousin.

A few weeks later a lady called on me. At first I did not recognize her, but she proved to be the seamstress who had made that black silk dress. "Don't you remember the dress I made for you?" she asked, excitedly. "Well, that later will be sewn up in the drapery. He got me to do it for him and made me promise not to tell you while he lived. He said if you cared for him you would never part with the only thing he ever gave you. If you did, you would be the loser thereby."

"Imagine my feelings! The dress had been sold to a dealer in second-hand clothing and was probably now beyond my reach. I took the lady into my confidence, bound her to secrecy and hastened to the shop in which I had left the silk dress. It had been sold and to whom the dealer did not know. I had nothing to do but to hope that the purchaser was an honest person who would find the will and restore it to me. How distinctly I remembered that Uncle Dan had charged me not to part with the dress and how bitterly I repented my disobe-
